Piperacillin, for example, is an effective broad-spectrum antibiotic used for the treatment of a variety of gram-negative bacterial infections including serious infections. Among these infections are: pneumonia, burn infections, urinary tract infections (particularly, cystitis and pyelonephritis), intra-abdominal infections, skin and skin structure infections, bone and soft tissue infections, eye infections and acute otitis media. Tobramycin, on the other hand, is a member of the aminoglycoside class of antibiotics and, as such, has a spectrum of activity similar to that of the aminoglycosides; however, tobramycin is useful for the treatment of infections caused by gram-negative bacteria that are resistant to aminoglycoside antibiotics. In the treatment of burn, urinary tract and cystic fibrosis infections, piperacillin is the antibiotic of choice. Tobramycin is used for the treatment of serious infections caused by gram-negative bacteria that are resistant to aminoglycosides.
